

Great Neck Community School
225 Schenck Ave
Great Neck, NY 11021
516-482-5005

For Immediate Release—20 May, 2009

Great Neck Community School contributes to Ronald McDonald House

Great Neck Community School (GNCS) families came together recently to collect new household and non-perishable food items to help restock the Ronald McDonald House of Long Island. Each child hand carried an item they purchased with their parent at the store and deposited it in boxes set aside at the school for this purpose. They gathered over 100 lbs of goods which bears witness to the power of many small hands helping others. This past week a representative from Ronald McDonald house, Mr. Walter Katz, came to visit the school and speak with the children about the importance of what they had done.

Ronald McDonald house helps families meet some of the challenges of making ends meet when confronted with a seriously ill child. In the current economy their work is all the more critical. The children appreciated the time Mr. Katz took to meet with them and came to understand that not everyone is as fortunate as we are.

Great Neck Community School has been dedicated to young children and their families since 1932. At this fully accredited, non-sectarian, multicultural preschool, discovery and love of learning are paramount. Visit the school's website www.gncommunityschool.org to find out more about how they engage children in the learning process, empower them to be independent and self-assured, and to enjoy the development of friendships that may last a lifetime.

####

For more information please contact Marc Jensen at 516-482-5005 or at marc@gncommunityschool.org

Walter Kat of Ronald McDonald House of Long Island and the preschool children from Great Neck Community School.